ORDNANCE ESTIMATES. Mr Sheridan rufe as foon as the Chancellor of the Exchequer came to his feat, and faid, he meant not to take up much of the time of the House, but he had an intention to make feveral motions, which he hoped would not meet with any objection. The subject of his motions, Mr Sheridan faid, were the fimares, which had been lafe an hour of the night last Monday, that it was impossible for him then to go into any fort of investigation of them, and having been moved in fo extraordinary manner, he observed, that it was not to be wendered at, that he and other Gentleman had not come down the next day to examine the estimates. or that the Report of the Committee had paffed without a fingle observation. It might, he was aware, be faid, that any reference to the Ordnance Ettimates, was, for the reasons he had stated, out of time, but as he meant not to press his motions upon the House if they should be at all objected to, and wished to have them then agreed to, rather for the purpose of laying the ground for future discussion, than with any relation to prevent debate, he hoped it would be allowed that it was right to make them prior to the recess. One great object of future dif-cussion, Mr Sheridan said, was a matter that had been mentioned in the debate of Monday last, when the Army and Ordnance Estimates had been voted, viz. the total of the Estimate of the Expence of the fystem of Fortification in the West Indies about to be adopted. It was undoubtedly material for that

House to know, what the estimate of the whole expence was previous to the fystem's having full Par-liamentary fanction, because the case might hapness. that works to a very large extent might be railed, and it might afterwards be faid to that House, "the three thousand men that you voted last year, was not the full augmentation necessary for the West Indies, our works already erected require to many more to man them, and you mult-cither vote the full need fary complement, or you weaken the iflands and threagthen the enemy, by putting them in eafy pol-feffion of works which we cannot defend and main-tain." In that view of the confequence, therefore, it was impossible to fay to what extent, or to what expence the works might be carried, or how it might affect the refources of the country, both in regard to men and money. Mr Sheridan declared, that he men and money. Mr Sheridan declared, that he held in his hand a paper which he deemed a valuable document. It was, he faid, a Report of the Board of Ordnauce, as to the intended plan of Portifications to be erected, and other projects necessary to be adopted, dated 1783, and figned RICHMOND. In that paper the noble Duke had stated the sufpicions that the conduct of the Board of Ordnance had long been liable to, and with a view to put an end to them, had in an open and manly way avowed his defigns with regard to future works and future plans, and fubmitted them to the confideration of Parliament. That paper, Mr Sheridan thought highly deferving the notice of the House, as it contained the noble Duke's own account of his intentions, and was therefore a proper subject of reference, when-ever an Ordnance Estimare was laid upon the table, during the time that the noble Duke should conti-nue to hold his office of Master-General of the Ordnance. In that report the house would see, that his Grace suggested that system of Fortification, both at home and abroad, which had, in the first instance, been agitated and discussed in that House, and so much to the honour of the Speaker, been decided against by the effect of his vote. The prefent proposal of fortifying the West Indies was, he declared, a part of the plan already exploded, and rejected by that House, and not as the Right Hon. Gentlemon had faid on Monday, a new idea arising out of new circumstances. In order, therefore, to rouse the House to a due attention to the imporrance of the confideration, Mr Sheridan faid, he should move for an Estimate of the whole expende of the intended plan of fortifying, the Wall India

Another matter. Mr Sheridan faid, he fhoold make a motion upon, was a Charge in the Estimate of 10,000 l. for the purchase of fome Powder Mills at Wakham Abber; a project in every point of view abfurd and impolitic, as it rended to annihilate the manufacture of Gun-powder in this country, and to substitute in its stead an unfair monopovested in the hands of Government only. The mischiefs of such a scheme, he said, were obvious and afcertainable from the experience of the Royal Powder Mills at Fevertham, where the expence of the Establishment had been so great, that every pound of powder cost Government four times at much as they could purchase it for from other ma-

A farther fubject of motion, Mr Sheridan faid, was a proposition that had already challenged and excited the attention of that House, viz. the railing a corps of artificers, conflitting of 600 men, and dimean to apply it in the bad fenfe of the word, but as marking a plan not founded in any found or ra-tional principle, for such he took the plan in queflion to be In order to prove this affertion, Mr Sheridan read a fentence from the Duke of Richmond's report of 1783, in which his Grace had flared, that from suffering some of the Artificers at Woolwich, Sheerness, &c. to be put into companies, the Artificery would never want Artificers, and a faving of 15000 l. would be made to Government. Before therefore any new plan of railing a corps of Artificers was adopted, Mr Sheridan declared it was necessary to know, what the faving made in consequence of the noble Duke's plan of 1783 amounted to, because if no fuch faving as was stated in the Report in his hand had been made, the present proposition of rating a corps of artificers, instead of being occonomical, would in fact be an additional expence to the public. Mr Sheridan descanted for a second or two, on the idle use of the word œconomy, and contended, that under that cover and pretence the noble Duke had confiderably encreased the patronage and influence of the Board of Ordnance, both of which, when first chofen Master General, he professed it to be his main object to currail and diminish. He ridicaled the idea of putting Artificers under Martial Law, and Subjecting them to military discipline, declaring that it was absurd in the extreme to suppose that men capable of earning half a crown or three (hillings a day, would enlift as foldiers, and work! in their ctive occupations for a third of the money d lefs; for who could expect that, carpenters would give up their freedom and their better wages for the mere douceur of Military discipline? The result, if the wild project were adopted, Mr Sheridan said, would only be, that we should have foldiers without discipline, and workmen without skill. Having commented with pointed irony on this part of the Ordnance estimates, Mr Sheridan called the attention of the House to the charge for the works at Cumberland Fort, and declared, that he almost repented the vote he had given against the noble Duke's general system of fortification of the dock yards, debated and discussed three or four years ago, because, from what he had fince feen, he had every reason to think, that the Noble Duke believed in his conscience, that the system ought to be adopted; and he (Mr Sheridan,) in his conscience believed that it would ultimately be adopted; and he declared, he had much rather the House should openly and knowingly adopt a bad precedent, than have a bad precedent foilted upon them indirectly, and against their confent. Mr Sheridan shortly ob.

ferred upon the various subjects he had mentioned, frequently adverting to the Duke of Richmond's report of 1783, and having read the motion he nicant to make on each, he concluded with moving for

"An estimate of the expence of completing the fortifications intended in the West Indies, diffin guishing the sums proposed to be allotted for the defence of each island, with an account of the " number of troops necessary to garrison the whole."

The Chancellor of the Exchequer faid, the Hon. Gentleman had unfortunately moved, in the first in-stance, what he must necessarily object to, whereas to malt of the other motions that he had opened, he did not fee the smallest ground of objection. With regard to the estimates of the whole amount of the fortifications intended for the West India Islands, he had flated to the House, in a late debate, that an eltimate of the total expence could not, from the nature of things, be made up at prefent; but that from what he knew of the fubject, he conjectured that it would amount to a fum as large as 180,000l. and pot exceeding 200,000 l. He could give no other answer then, and as he knew that a complete estimate could not be made out, he must necessarily relift a motion, which could not possibly be complied with. With regard to the tragical manner in which the Hon. Gentleman, had alluded to the Ordnance report of 1783, and had talked of the fortifications intended to be carried on in the West Indies, he begged to observe, that the Hon. Gentleman had taken new ground, and had now objected to them as a part of the fullem submitted to Parliament some time lince, and called upon gentlemen to oppose them on that ground, whereas it had been before objected, that it was the commencement of a new fystem, and, on that occasion, as the House would recoland, on that occasion, as the Floure would recon-ted, he had faid in reply, that it was no new fystem, but a part of the old one, to which not only various principles admitted by those who opposed the syitem of fortification at home, to be in the favour of that fystem, would apply, but many additional principles of found policy and unquestionable wifdom. The Chancellor of the Exchequer curforily touch ed upon each of the motions stated by Mr Sheridan, as part of the ftring that he meant to move, and remarked upon molt of them. With respect to that relative to the 10,000 l. for the purchase of powder mills at Waltham, he faid, there certainly was no invidious intention in government to attack the interefts of the gun-powder manufacturers in general; that he for one was perfectly aware how dangerous it was to differ with men who dealt in gun-powder, but that it was highly expedient government should have fome mills in their possession, as well for the purpose of trying experiments in the manufacture, and endeavouring to prevent the existence of those complaints to which it was well known the gun-powder ferved Last war was liable, as to guard against the consequence of finding themselves, on an emergency, wholly at the mercy of the manufactur-The Chancellor of the Exchequer faid farther, that though the primary expense of the establishment would be great, the future expense of the plan would be very inconfiderable when weighed against its utility and importance. He concluded with repeating, that his, ground of objection to the motion was his perfect consciousness that it could not polls-bly be complied with.

Mr Sheridan, with the confent of the House, withdrew the motion.

IMPEACHMENT OF SIR ELIJAH IMPEY. Sir Gilbert Ellist rofe to call upon the Honfe to take the next necessary step, with respect to the ar-ticles of Charge of High Crimes and Missemean-ors, that he had on Wednesday last exhibited against Sir Elijah Impey. Sir Gilbert said, in pur-suance of the line of conduct that he had stated to the House as that he meant to adopt, he continued to think it better to trust to their being able to fur-nish themselves with the substance of the Charges that he had presented against Sir Elijah Impey, from the printed copies that he faw gentlemen had in their hands, than from any statement he could offer to them, and therefore he should proceed to move, that the said Charges be referred to the confideration of a Committee of the whole House, not deeming the House sufficiently masters of the allegations to proceed farther, before they had, as a Committee, enquired into the foundation of the Whenever a member upon his legs urged an accufation of a ferious nature against any individual, Sir Gilbert observed, it was the confant and uniform practice of the House to fend the accusation to a Committee for enquiry, in order to afcertain how far the Charge might merit their farther cognizance. In the present case, therefore, from what he had stated on a former day, as well as from the fuller information contained in the printed Charges in their hands, ir would, he conceived, be univerfaily admitted, that the matters of allega-tion that had been flated against Sir Elijth Impey were of sufficient weight and importance to entitle them to a reference to a Committee. With regard to the first Charge, that against Nundocomar, he had the authority of the majority of the Council in India; of the majority of the Directors at home, and the confent of almost all mankind for the criminal construction put upon the fact. For the Patna Caule Charge, he had the authority of a politive act of Parliament, which, though it was true, it censured not the Judge and Court directly, yet liberated the parties from perpetual imprisonment, and indemnified them for the fufferings they had in curred previous to its passing; and thence indirectly bit obviously conveyed a confuse on the sentence, and those who delivered it. For the Cossipural Charge, he had the authority of another act of Par liament, and for the Sudder Dewannee Advel Charge, and also for the Sudder Dewannee Actele Charge, and also for the Affidavit Charge, he had the authority of that House, who having seat the principal to a folemn trial before the House of Lords, for his conduct respecting them, could not but consider the part taken by Sir Elijah Impey in both, as equally worthy of investigation. nor doubt, therefore, but that the House would agree that the Charges should be referred to a Committee of the whole House. He accordingly moved, that they be referred to a Committee of the whole House, on Monday the 4th of February

The Chancellor of the Exchequer faid, he ap proved of the present proposition much better, this that which he had understood the Hon. Baroner to have before stated his intention of making, viz. that of fending the Charges to a feparate Committee for confideration. The Charges were undoubted weighty and ferious a but it would have ill become that House, unacquainted as they were with their grounds (for they had not yet been opened to them) To far to have given them countenance and author ty, as to have recognized them in the first instance. and delivered them over to a separate Com The mode now proposed was certainly the fit and proper mode to adopt, and the only way of after-taining before they took any other step in the protaining before they took any other step in the pro-ceeding, what probable proof there was of the alle-gations being substantiated. For his part, almough from the hasty perusal he had been able to give the Charges, he was not then prepared to pronounce an opinion upon them, nor did he mean prematurely to do fo, yet he must confess that he had very ferious doubts, whether the inferences, drawn the facts alledged, were grounded in the principles of English law. He mentioned them, however, merely as doubts, and declared, he did not fee the possibility of objections to the present motion. The motion was confequently carried, being s-greed to unanimously. The House rose at half past FIVE, and adjourn ed to the 31st of January next.

The following abstract, imperfect af we cooleds it to be, will serve to convey a general idea of the Size Articles of Charge against Sir Elijah Impey, presented to the House of Commons by Sir Gilbert

That in pursuance of this corrupt deligo, he entertained the profecution; permitted the indiction to be tried by a jury of British subjects; pasted seatence of death on the Rajah; refused to grant an appeal therefrom, or to respite the sentence until his Majesty's pleasure should be known; and caused the fentence to be executed on the Rajah in a manner shocking to the religious opinions of the Gentoos, although the Rajah was not within the criminal ju-rildiction of the Supreme Court, and although the pretended crime of which he was indiched was not capital in India, either by the Gentoo law, the Mahomedan law, or the English law.
II. PATNA CAUSE.

That, in 1777, a certain fuit was commenced in the Court of the Provincial Council of Paina, between Bahader Beg Khan, nephew and adopted fon of Shabbar Beg Khan, and Nauderah Begum, the widow of the faid Shabbar Big; which fuit, the parties being Mahomedans, was, according to the practice of the Courts, referred to certain officers versed in the Mahomedan law, belonging to the faid Court, and judgment given therein, according to the report of the faid officers.

That by virtue of a precept from the Provincial Court, the judgment was legally executed by the faid officers ; and that, fubfequent thereto, in 1779; Nauderah Begum commenced an adi in the Supreme Court against the faid officers and the faid Bahader Beg; and that although the Supreme Court possessed no jurisdiction, either ori-ginal or appellant, over the Ptovincial Courts, Sir Elijah Impey proceeded in the faid cause to trial and judgment. That in the course of the proceedings in the faid action, he betrayed many inflances of grofs and no-torious injustice, and of flagrant and malicious partiality; that, by awarding damages to an enormous amount, when he knew the incapacity of the defendants to discharge the same, he procured all the effects of a criminal profecution to be inflicted as a punishment, by subjecting them to a perpetual im-prisonment. That the execution of the judgment of the Supreme Court produced the miterable death of one of the defendants, and that the rest were imprisoned in the common jail of Calcutta for two years and upwards, until they were released by the interference of the British Parliament, and a compenfation made to them for their fufferings.

That failing in the object of this offer, and not meeting with better fuccess in propositions of the saie nature to his Majesty's Ministers at home, he, fanie nature to his Majetty's Ministers at home, he, by his illegal proceedings, ultimately drove the Supreme Council, in their defence of the rights of the natives; to an extremity bordering on civil violence; from which alarming state of diffention, the Governor-General took a pretence for purchasing a reconciliation with Sir Elijah Impey, by reviving the Court of Sudder Dewannee Adaulet, and placing him at the head of it, with a large salary 4 after which, all disputes between the Supreme Court and the Sopreme Council, relative to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Conneil, relative to the jurifdiction over the Zemindar, finally disappeared.

That, in consequence of measures adopted by the Sopreme Council, by the advice of Sir John Day, the Company's Advocare General, the capias returning unexecuted, a writ of sequestration was issued against the lands, &c. of the Zemindar: That this writ was fent by a European officer, who being farrounded; though no violence was offered to his person, sent for further affishance; and with the privity, and by the advice of Sir Elijah Impey, the Sheriff sent a reinforcement of English failors and fepoys to the number of fifty men; that, on notice of the reinforcement, the Zennindar told his people to drop all relifance, and bade them, "Go with empty hands, claim the protection of the great Council, and though they may kill two or three of you, say nothing, because we are poor Zemindars, and cannot contend with the people of the great Addulet." And the European officer did afterwards proceed to bind and beat several of the superior sernts of the Zemindar, and broke the door of the rants of the Zemindar, and broke the door of the Zenama, and plundered the house; and next morming again beat and disgraced the fervants, and sequence the reft of the effects, and sealed the door—
"Even thus much did they do, that they entered the Femple, where no Musfulman is permitted to to, and spit in it, and also stripped it of the gold and silver ornaments. Such outrages were never known to be committed in the annals of any king."

Welthinster hall, for the trial of Mr Hastings, on the 13th of February.

If the question of impeachment it carried in the Commons, the trial of Sir Elijah Imped will probably follow that of Mr Hastings.

The House of Commons have not attended a state trial in that Hall, as a Committee of the whole House, since the trials of the rebel Lords.

The Chaplain of the House of Commons not being appointed to preach before that House on the toth of January next, and the House having ading appointed to preach before that House on the 30th of January next, and the House having adjourned to the 31st, the Commons, it is supposed, will not go to St. Margaret's Church on a heat day, it will appear therefore rather singular, for the Lords only to observe the commemoration of that day. They appointed the Bithop of Lincoln to preach at the Abbey Church, Westminster.

Government have it in contemplation to make an alteration in the Excise duties on make and laying it on the former. We are affored, that this was a part of the business on which the Commissioners of Excise had an interview with the minister last week.

production of Mr Colman jun. was performed at the Theatre Royal bere, for the first time, on Thursday last. This piece abounds with those semiments which recommend and inculcate the moral virtues of juffice, fiberality, and humanity. It is also interfered with many happy cholen favyrical frokes against the Slave-trade, and those concerned in cartaing it on. While the piece is replete with genuine wit and humour, the more ferious parts are rendered peculiarly interesting and affecting, from the pe-culiarly distressing situations in which the author has artfully and judiciously contribed to throw the most striking characters in the drama. The Opera was well and firefully eaft. It was performed through-out with that propriety and abilities which might have been expected from those masterly a flors who have been expected from those malterly actors who falled up the principal parts, and was received by the audionce with every mark of approbation and appliante. The medic, particularly the Overture, is admirable. On this occasion, the Manager has given another striking proof to the Public, that no trouble of expence will be wanting on his part, to latford them enerteamment. In this Opera, feveral entire new feenes, which do honour to the arrift, were exhibited, and received by the audience with While the Duke of Orleans was in England, the universal appliance. This effare is fituated within twelve miles of Kirked-bright, on she great military road to Ireland—The house is modern, large, and commodious, and, with a complete fet of offices, is in the very best repair. There is an excellent pigeon cot, and sish ponds well stocked with carpetench, and perch, with fallmon, trout, and perch shing in the river Urr, and locks adjacent. The situation is since commanding very extensive prospects of the adjacent country, which is remarkably pleasant, well cultivated, and plenty of game in it. There are above 50 acres of thriving wood in the policy, part of which is full grean, on the land upon which this wood grows.

The fertility of these lands is too well known to need description—They are occupied by a fet of as wealthy industrious and intelligent tenants as any in that country. The uncommon punctuality with which the rents are paid is the best proof of these lands, being set at moderate rents. They are capable of great improvement, by means of shell marle, of which there is great abundance within the lands and in the neighbourhood.

Coal and lime are brought by water carriage within four miles of the premises, where also the produce of the lands may be exported. A lime quarry is also just opened in the neighbourhood.

These lands are all inclosed and subdivised, and the same Carter, overser at Mollance, will show the premise. For These lands are all inclosed and subdivided, and the farm steadings are all fately built and in the hest repair. James Carter, overfier at Mollance, will show the premise. For further particulars application may be made at any time betwist and the 20th of January next—to the proprietor, at Blackwood, by Dumfries, or to James Stormouth, wri-ter in Edioburgh, who has power to conclude a private harming.
